Notes from the GM.

Hi Everyone,

Marvellous to be at a run site in time to do the run! There was not a big turnout for the run but the camaraderie was brilliant. After the guests (Ken – Rose's grandson and Hasten – Hot Lip's friend) had been welcomed information was given out that the run started off along the track below the temple and then headed for the teahouse and although there were no checks, we should stay on paper.

Off we trundled down the newly constructed road and then along the track. At one fork we were expecting to go right but the paper didn't so we went left. Not long after we did turn off to the right. It was one of those runs that skirts round a bit and up a bit and repeats this pattern for a while, and just when you think you have got into a comfy rhythm, the serious on up starts. Because of all the recent rain the going was very slippery at this point and so it was here that the runners really started to spread out. There was a great deal of grunting and groaning as we hauled our weary bodies up. Eventually we got to the top ran along a bit and then started a winding on down.

The lower we got the more obvious it was that we were on the wrong side of the hill and there would be another uphill section to conquer before we could attack the Tiger. At least this uphill stretch was easy to manage and then we just had to negotiate the long run in.

Back at the run site it was lovely to see Malas who has been missing in action for far too long but like me she has work commitments and can't make a regular appearance.

The start of the circle was delayed as Rambo and Toddy were still in the jungle. Just as Goodyear was starting to get people primed to do a search party, the couple appeared and there was relief all round.

We had a short circle. Toddy was the first victim and the charge was loitering in the jungle with Rambo – What were they up to? Next we iced Sai Seng because in the past when he had been a regular runner he had been a fine figure of a man but now his attendance is less regular he has a Buddha body profile! Money Manfred was called to the ice throne. We all know it is the Harriets' run but there is no need for the men to abandon their clothes. Rambo was next to be iced and for her it was a reward for tirelessly doing GM's work and doing it so well. Justbeer then iced GM for finally appearing! Last on ice was Malas –the Bunny. It was generally agreed that the run was great, the food delicious and the location very pleasant.

Many thanks Malas for a brilliant Thursday evening.

NB The Christmas Run has been changed to December 15th. It will be at Mar Vista Poolside.

All expats and Christians I would be most grateful if you contributed to this next week so that we can put on a brilliant evening for everyone.
