Burst for 5 Feb. 2015

Run site: Youth Park, new car park

Scribe: Viking

After having received the 'heavy' task of writing the Burst, I quickly counted the crowd and I guess we were around 25 – out of which 15 went for the run, I guess. Circle was called, and shortly after we were sent off, across the road and down the ditch on the other side...

We quickly crossed the ditch without getting our feed wet, and went on-up on the other side through all the rubbish. Then passing our old Youth Park run site, and to the right towards the stable. The geese made noise, and a very angry dog looked like he would charge some of the runners, but gave up eventually, and instead barked like crazy. We crossed the usual stream and followed the trail that went gradually up. After some on-up skirting behind Jesselton, when we reached an altitude about 175 m, the usual 'Chief Hare' - Sai Seng – must have thought "this is enough – now I will send them down again". A long on-down of almost 100 m followed, and then paper took us up again. And it got steeper and steeper. The paper let us around huge boulders, and after a while the paper went up between two enormous boulders. I looked up on a very steep and difficult ascent. I could see Tiny and Fancy Pants struggling to find something to hold on to. There was very little vegetation up there, only a lot of very slippery sand and grit. I decided to stay here, being worried that they might send a few loose rocks my way, and there was nowhere to escape flying rocks, if that happened. Eventually Tiny and Fancy negotiated the last bit and they were safe up. Now my turn – and yes, this was a challenge...

Safe up, with more solid ground under the feet - the paper continued up, up, up... The route was long and steep, but then approaching 300 m a sigh of relief when reaching the Point 45/39 trail - and luckily, paper went down again. Following the trail down was easy, but I also think we deserved it, after that climb. Before coming back to run site, the trail passed the small garden with the beautiful flowering Bougainville – what a nice way to finish the run...

Length 3.1 km, max 302m, gain about 430m

Back at run site the food was soon to be served and Sai Seng and Itchi were making a small bond fire for frying eggs – very nice...

Thanks to the 'Chief Hare' for a good run and Pussycat for good food.
